

November 3, 2010

EDGYTIM

EdgyTim.com Publisher

Talk about it in the Message Boards

Chicago (Ill.) Morgan Park junior dual threat quarterback prospect DaeShaun Hurley (6-foot-1, 180 pounds) has been having a big season so far for the Mustangs and head coach Lexie Spurlock as the Mustangs are gearing up for a big Class 6A second round playoff game at Prairie Ridge on Saturday. Get to know this latest underclassmen prospect to watch in this recruiting update.

Rivals.com

DaeShaun Hurley is a true dual threat offensively for the Mustangs this season.

in college but I'm still not totally certain on a major for now. My grades are pretty good and I'll take the ACT in the spring."

"It feels good to get a state playoff win," Hurley said. "Now we need to get ready for a tough game this week at Prairie Ridge. They are a really good team and we know that it will just get harder and harder from here on out. It's a pretty exciting time of the year and we just want to keep winning and moving forward."

Hurley has begun to draw recruiting interest from several schools.

"I've been getting steady mail from quite a few schools over the past few months. Most of the Big Ten schools have been sending me had written mail and letters. I've also been getting steady mail from several Pac-10 schools plus Ole Miss, NIU and several MAC schools. I camped at Illinois last summer so I'm pretty familiar with them and I was a part of the Team First camps at Illinois as well."

Hurley talked about his favorite school growing up and much more.

"I grew up as a big fan of Oregon. I always liked the style of offense at Oregon and I also like the uniforms and everything about the school and the program. I'm looking at majoring in engineering Hurley also tried to pattern his game after a handful of quarterbacks who he admires.

"I'm really a big fan of Terrelle Pryor at Ohio State along with Cam Newton at Auburn are two quarterbacks who I admire and who I try to patter my game after. They are threats to both run and thrown it equally as well and that's what I try to do in my overall game."